To further facilitate generic drug product availability and to assist the generic pharmaceutical industry in identifying the most appropriate methodology for developing drugs and generating evidence necessary to support ANDA approval, publish FDA product-specific guidance describing the Agency's current thinking and expectations about how to develop generic drug products therapeutic equivalent to specific reference-listed drugs. Increased transparency on product-specific guidance gives applicants seeking generic drugs a better opportunity to allocate resources efficiently. The agency aims to ensure that policies and regulations — and scientific standards — keep pace with the science of equivalence. Improving patient access to high quality and affordable medicines supports FDA's mission to promote public health. The agency regularly posts and reviews product-specific guidance. FDA always seeks feedback and considers all comments to the dossier before it starts working on the final versions of product-specific guidance. The FDA posts plans for issuing new or revised product-specific guidance on the upcoming product-specific guidances for complex generic drug product development webpage. In April 2019, the Product-Specific Guidance Database was improved as follows: Text Search of PSGs by active ingredient, or by the Reference-listed Drug (RLD) or Reference Standard (RS) application number Users can filter search results using a text search box Users can easily search results in Excel, CSV, or PDF format search results export, are now pawned, providing faster search resources back to Top Home » Target expands line of casper products with new mattress and Exclusive SheetsTarget announced last week that it was expanding its partnership with Casper through ' launch an exclusive mattress of the company in its stores across the country. The discount store retailer shared the news last Thursday, revealing it will bring the Casper Essential into Target stores nationwide starting this month. The model is billed as Casper's first streamlined mattress and will come in six sizes priced from $350 to $725. The bed-in-a-box brand will also debut a new line of Target-exclusive sheets priced from $75 to $110.Check us review of the original Casper Mattress! The BreakdownTo gives you a better sense of what this collaboration looks like, I'm going to break down the products in the new Casper+ Target line. The Casper Essential - The bed is built with three separate layers of foam, including a pressure-relief section of memory foam. As with other Casper mattresses, the Essential features an open-cell design intended to optimize coolness and air flow throughout the structure. Customers can try the bed in 45 target locations across the country and buy it in store or online. The Weightless - Designed with a unique hybrid weave of 100% cotton, the sheets are very lightweight and super soft. They come in colors including light pink, pie green, navy, gray and white. Stay the same - The Casper line will continue to feature the brand's foundation, cushion, Cool Sheet Set, lounge, duvet cover and waterproof mattress protector. Image courtesy of CasperThis launch marks a major milestone in the companies' relationship, which began last May after Target invested $75 million in a funding round for the mattress company. By June, Casper products were on display in Targets across the country and available for purchase in 1,200 stores nationwide. Since our launch online three years ago, we've seen a huge demand from customers who want to experience the Casper brand in person, Casper CEO Philip Krim said at the time. Partnering with Target allows us to bring Casper products directly to in-store consumers on a national scale. Target shares our mission of champion sleep as an essential pillar of well-being, as well as our pursuit of an unprecedented customer journey. Popular image courtesy of Casper. Bedface is a new bedding company looking to improve the online sheets and bedding industry. With over 24 colors available, bedface allows you to mix and customize your skins to create your own masterpiece. This week, Sleepopolis decided to put this new company to the test. Will bedface's colorful adaptation be a hit? Read on below to find out! Hurry? No worries. Click here to jump to the review summary! Construction & MaterialsThe bedface sheets are constructed from a 100% long staple cotton. Typically, a skin set includes a fitted sheet, a flat sheet, and 2 pillow cases. Bedface took a different route. They offer 3 different sets to choose from. For our purposes, we reviewed the popular sleeper set that includes a fitted sheet, a duvet cover and 2 pillow cases. These skins are slightly thicker than most and are designed to get softer with each wash. The duvet cover has a hidden button wrapper for additional durability and a smoother aesthetic. The fitted sheet has an elastic band that covers the ends of the mattress. The sides of the fitted sheet are similar to a flat sheet, meaning there is no elastic band running into the sides of the mattress. Finally, the pillow cases contain an envelope enclosure. This allows for a tighter fit around the cushion in addition to avoiding the sloppy, extra substance. These sheets are constructed of larger wires inside of a looser weave, allowing for optimal breathlessness.bedface sheetsBuild QualityOverall, the bedface sheets look to have good build quality. I determine this by examining every inch of the stitching, material quality, and overall construction. close examination of these skins there were virtually zero loose wires. The few loose threads I did find were easy Although not all of them could be pulled from the set, the few remainers didn't seem to cause any kind of additional damage to the set. The pillow cases were flawless and the fitted sheet had a nice, snug fit all the way around the mattress.bedface sheets - king size on platform bed (duvet, fitted sheet, and pillow cases)Durability & Performance Tests I tested the bedface sheets, I focused on some main points. For starters, shrink. The most common complaint regarding skins tends to be shrinkage. There's nothing more frustrating than purchasing a new skin set just to watch it drastically shrink after just one wash/dry cycle. After shrinkage, wire was examined. Are there any loose threads? Have any loose threads gotten worse by normal use? Did any new threads surface after the sheets were washed and dry? Lastly, I test the colors/dyes used in the sheets in search of low quality material (runoff, bleeding, etc.). Shrinkage TestShrinkage tests are an important part of the testing process. In order to shrink over the skin set I start taking meters of the flat sheet and a pillow case (before washing/dry cycle). These meetings will serve as my baseline for comparison. Next, I run the sheets by a standard wash and dry cycle and take new meetings after the cycle is complete. Having done so, I compare the original meetings to the new set and determine the overall shrinkage after one wash/dry cycle. The bedface sheets had some of the small shrink levels of I saw, but especially small compared to other 100% cotton sets. The duvet cover shrank 3.14% (compared to the original size) and the pillow case shrank 2.90%. Anything under 5% shrinkage is good. Shrinkage test – duvet cover shrank by 3.14% after washing/drying. Pillow case shrank by 2.90% after washing/drying. Damage TestThroughout this test I take a deeper look at skin set for any new or additional damage that may have been a byproduct of normal use or standard washing/dry cycles. Upon further review, the bedface sheets appear to have stood well. After my test period + was/dry there were no new issues under the sheets and the existing loose threads did not grow in length. Color testThe color test is used to show any color/dye rundown (if any) of the sheets. To kick off this test, I soak up a pillow case in hot water and allow the pillow case to fully absorb the water. Then I pour out any excess water with my hands. Immediately following, I place the pillow case on top of a bed of paper towels. Finally, I firmly press a rolling pin against the pillow case and examine the paper towels for any kind of color runoff. The bedface sheets showed no signs of color or dye runoff, indicating they were made of quality dye and sheets color test - zero color transmissionFeel, Cooling, & StyleThe bedface sheets have an interesting feel about them. Most Cotton Sheets I tested is thinner and very soft. In this case, the bedface sheets are thicker than most and on a scale of 1-10, where 1 is the softest, these skins land around a 4. Oddly enough, bedface is able to make this combination work. With these skins I felt like I was welcomed by a more rustic but comfortable and lived in feel. While that sounds weird, the bedface sheets are very comfortable, even if they're not as soft as your traditional cotton skin set. Close up the bedface skin sets, which are duvet, pillows, and fitted sheetCooling were another added bonus with this skin set. Simple with a 100% cotton design is an important factor in the cooling and breathlessness of this set. Cotton just does a great job of allowing airflow between the mattress and sheets. Last but not least, style. While style may seem like a small portion of the pie, no one wants to spend a lot of money on an ugly skin set (of which I'm aware). Enter, sleep. With a litany of different colors and styles available, bedface is a great option for the sleeper who's looking for their bedroom's look. During my test, I reviewed their feather grey and stellar white sleeper set. Personally, I enjoyed have a white fitted sheet contrasted by a grey duvet cover and pillow cases. Aesthetically speaking, it crushes bedriding just in my opinion. There is a litany of color options, sizes, styles, and set options. They have a set, color, style and price point that works for a wide variety of sleepers. Should I Buy the BedFace Sheets? I would recommend the bedface sheets to sleepers that: Want 100% cotton sheets - made from 100% cotton, these skins have a nice feeling in addition to an increasingly softer feel with each wash. Want to set a slightly thicker skin - the bedface sheets contain a slightly thicker construction than most cotton skin sets I've tested to date. The thickness of these sheets makes for a more welcome and lived in feel. In addition, they feel more durable. Want quality sheets - from head to toe, these sheets are constructed of very high end materials in addition to solid build quality. I never once worried as if the sheets were going to last through a wash cycle or just through normal use. The thicker and more robust feeling gives me a great deal of confidence in bed-face. Want to create your own color scheme – with 3 different style options and 24 different colors available, bedface can mix the sleeper and match their products, creating their own masterpiece of a sheet set.
